

To help prevent the spread of the COVID-19 virus, the Boston Public Health Commission advises all apartment and condominium buildings or other buildings with multiple residential units to put the following restrictions in place:

- Limit access to the building to only residents, staff, and essential delivery and service persons.
 - No social visits.
- Require all residents, staff, and service persons to wear a mask or other face covering while in the common areas of the building
- Encourage social distancing by closing non-essential public spaces

Building A Healthy Boston
Mayor Martin J. Walsh

To help prevent the spread of the COVID-19 virus, the Boston Public Health Commission advises all apartment and condominium buildings or other buildings with multiple residential units to put the following restrictions in place:

- Limit access to the building to only residents, staff, and essential delivery and service persons.
 - No social visits.
- Require all residents, staff, and service persons to wear a mask or other face covering while in the common areas of the building
- Encourage social distancing by closing non-essential public spaces

